Short Films by Star Rating

Theatrically released motion pictures of 40 minutes or less

For every great feature, there's a great short, and this list attempts to chronicle just some of those tiny masterpieces – and their not-so-masterful counterparts. For films to make this list, they must have played in at least one film festival or showcase, or theatrical venue, for a paying audience. Films shown only on television (or available only on DVD, Blu-ray, video or online) are reserved for my Television list. Also not included here are student films and similar projects that have never been presented at a theatrical venue that charged admission to viewers. (Please note that this is slightly more lenient than the qualifications for the feature-film lists, which require that a film of more than 40 minutes play at least two major festivals, or have a limited or general release.) Theatrical newsreels (pre-television) and theatrically released trailers are not eligible for this list, although mini-documentaries and travelogues (typically playing alongside trailers and B-features in the 1930-1950s) are. Short films shown at theme parks and museums are eligible, but not if they rely on animatronic/interactive/live elements. Shorts produced for timed competitions, such as 48-hour or 24-hour projects, are not included here, unless those films were subsequently screened at a second venue.

The ratings system is the same as that of the feature-film list, just with no half or quarter stars. That difference is due to simplification and also to the fact that it's admittedly difficult, and perhaps somewhat unfair, to compare a 2-minute film to a 40-minute one using quarter stars. (So please keep in mind there is some variation with each star rating.) I discourage you from comparing a 5-star short with a 5-star feature, as they are different animals. Instead, please compare shorts to shorts, and features to features. This list also differs from the feature-film lists in that many of these short films were directed and written by amateurs, first-timers and students working with little time and virtually no budget. Therefore, I would strongly suggest that you avoid condemning filmmakers who produce a 1-star or 0-star short film. Indeed, it might be more appropriate when judging a student film to treat a 2-star rating as a thumbs-up, a 1-star as mediocre and a 0-star as a learning experience on the road to better things.

Also note that, somewhat unlike the feature-film list, I give some short films more credit than they deserve here, if judged by today's standards, by virtue of their historic contribution to cinema. Examples include the first motion ever captured by a single-lens camera (Louis Le Prince's Roundhay Garden Scene from 1888) and films by the Lumière Brothers, Edwin Porter, Georges Méliès and Alice Guy, and, to a lesser extent, the Biograph movies of D.W. Griffith. (On a historical note, this list does not recognize Louis Le Prince's Man Walking Around a Corner from 1887 as a true film by the modern definition, as it was shot on a 16-lens camera, not a single-lens one. Also not included here are the stop-motion creations of Eadweard Muybridge using multiple cameras, the earliest of which was a race-horse study in 1878; the 12-images-per-second photo collages of Etienne Jules Marey; and the phenakistiscope creations of Joseph Plateau as early as the 1830s. However, these experiments are worth mentioning as links between true cinematography and the magic-lantern and still-photograph sequences of the early and mid 19th century.)

Short films originally released in theaters as part of a feature are not listed here, even if they later received separate releases outside of the feature format. Examples include Disney's Peter and the Wolf as part of Make Mine Music, and Disney's Wind in the Willows as part of The Adventures of Ichabod and Mr. Toad. This means no content appears on both this list and the feature lists.

Another shortcoming of this list is that it does not attempt – and never could – to chronicle all the short films I've ever seen, unlike the feature-film lists, which do just that. It's simply too tough. Making it even more difficult to compile such a list is the fact that the industry makes it too difficult to see new shorts after they have played at film festivals or other, similar venues. For this reason, I passionately support fellow film lovers who advocate a system of greater exposure for short films, both online and as feature-film companions in mainstream cinemas. And I encourage you to contribute your voices to this cause – and to support studios such as Disney that play shorts before their features. Sadly, the over-priced American film-going experience now consists of a bombardment of loud and obnoxious content – commercials, TV promos, dumbed-down trailers and other junk – so I would argue that it makes sense, both financially and aesthetically, to include a good short film among this pre-feature smorgasbord.

↑ THUMBS UP

(This is my dividing line between thumbs-up and thumbs-down. It represents my best analysis regarding whether an intelligent, fairly discerning adult audience should see a film (keeping in mind that adults should learn to embrace their inner child from time to time). But, admittedly, film is immensely personal, as is all art. So, based upon your own tastes, age and life experiences, you might want to give a 2-star film a try. And also keep in mind that this list includes many movies by students, beginners and others operating on little or no budget. If you are one of those filmmakers, a low star rating should not be cause for sadness. Instead, please consider those ratings simply a "better luck next time" wish and an opportunity to grow in your craft.)
